Widowof Paul Leicester Attends Sad Service in Library Where Tragedy Occurred.

MANY WEEP IN STREET.

Bodies of Brothers Taken to Irvington-on-the-Hudson to Lie Side by Side in One

In the room where Malcolm Ford killed his brother Paul two coffins rested side by side this morning. One was short-the coffin of the brother who was slain; the other was long-the coffin of the brother who became a mur-derer and a suicide under stress of jeaiousy and fancied wrong.

Side by side these coffins were carried down the broad stairway of the quaint mansion Paul Leicester Ford built for himself in East Seventyseventh street and placed in hearses standing side by side at the curb. A great crowd of women and young girls wept hysterically at the sight. The pity of it was overwhelming.

The sad funeral was held in the library where Paul Leicester Ford had expected to do so much work. His widow was able to come from her room and be present at the simple services conducted by Bishop Burgess, of Long Island, who officiated at their marriage. None but relatives were present. The room was banked high with flowers—white roses, illacs and a profusion of set pleces.

The bodies will rest side by side in the family plot at Irvington. The widow of Paul Ford was unable to travel to the grave of her husband, but the other members of the family rode on the train that carried the bodies out of New York, bodies are serviced by the control of the services and the present the services and the services are the control of the family rode on the train that carried the bodies out of New York, bodies are services and the present the services are the services and the services are the services and the services are the services and the services are the services are the services and the services are the services and the services are the services are the services and the services are the services and the services are the services

The bodies were taken to Irvington on the train leaving the Grand Central Station at 2.15 o'clock. Both coffins were literally smothered in flowers. A private car for the mourners was attached to the train.

Webster, the little son of Malcolm Ford, is now in the custody of his mother, who divorced her husband four years are. It is not likely that the family of the father will make any effort to secure possession of the boy.
